Dear Parents/Carers,

I'm writing to inform you to a change to Red class which will take effect from the start of next half-term, Monday 24th February.

We have taken the decision to re-establish a separate nursery class that will be led and taught by Jeanette O'Connell. Children who are currently in Red class but of nursery age will join this class which will be known as 'Rainbow class'. From the start of next half-term, we ask that nursery children are dropped off and collected via the gate by the main office. This will give them direct access to their nursery classroom.

Children of reception age will continue to be taught by Cara Flynn and can be dropped off as normal. However, we do ask that parents now say goodbye to their children at the door and do not come into school. We wish to support children in gaining independence in hanging their belongings and entering the classroom themselves.

We will still plan regular times during the week for all our Early Years children to play and learn together to help support their social skills development and friendships already made. However, we feel these changes will support all children to receive age-appropriate experiences and learning.

Should you have any questions regarding these changes, then please speak to the class teams or myself.

Yours sincerely,

Paul Cornall
